

We are back from our third recce-trip for the Celebration Run in July. Here are some news for you:

At Compiègne we will be allowed to park our cars on the historic clearing, weather permitting. The race-track Ecuïères is looking forward receiving us, they seem to be very used to have Classics on their 3.6km track, and the Château de Courcelles has allowed us to present some of the participating cars to park in their gardens. The roadbook is almost finished for both days. Friday we will see some scenic roads in the Picardie area, while on Saturday there will be lots of vines to see and great roads to enjoy our cars thoroughly. However we recommend already to adhere to the speed limits.

Last but not least we have agreed to have period live music in the keep of the castle where we will be having our first apéro dînatoire.

All in all it is looking very good and we hope already that the weather will be as great as our cars are.

Writing Roadbook

Room with a view – Château de Courcelles

Back home after hard work